

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An adjustable optical attenuator using S-type wave-guide comprises a cladding layer having a first refraction index and forming a slot therein; and a core layer embedded in the slot of the cladding layer and having a second refraction index sensitive to temperature 5 change, wherein light is transmitted through the core layer, and light attenuation varies according to the temperature of the core layer.